Also included are tools and instruments which may pose a threat to public safety or be used in war, in particular those listed in the three schedules annexed hereto, as well as any instrument classified as a weapon by the Inspector-General of Police and Customs.

Whenever the term “arms” is used in this Law, it means cold steel, firearms listed in the three schedules annexed hereto, ammunition and main parts, unless otherwise implied by the context.

2. “Firearms” means lethal weapons fitted with a barrel of whatever kind from which a bullet or projectile may be fired, in particular smooth-bore weapons, pistols, rifles, automatic pistols, guns and machine-guns listed in schedules 2 and 3 annexed to this Law, the respective ammunition and the main parts of firearms, unless otherwise implied by the context.

Also included is anything containing or producing a harmful gas or liquid, intended for use in firing a weapon.

This shall also apply to grenades and similar bombs, whether or not designed for use through a firearm.

5. “Main parts of firearms”. These are the parts of weapons which, although they may not be used individually as a firearm, are key elements that cause a weapon to be considered a firearm, such as the barrel, the bolt, the bolt mechanisms and the metal casing. The main parts do not include the muzzle or the butt of a rifle or a pistol.

The Inspector-General of Police and Customs may, at his discretion, add anything to schedules 1 and 2, or omit anything therefrom. However, only additions shall be permitted to schedule 3.

Article 4

Traditional weapons kept as heirlooms or decorations, inside the house, which are determined as such by a decision of the Inspector-General of Police and Customs, shall be exempted from the provisions of licensing referred to in the first paragraph of article 3. The possession of such arms shall be governed by the following conditions:

- (1) The applicant must be of Omani nationality;
- (2) He must be at least 25 years old;

Article 6

Licences are personal. The person to whom a licence is issued may not give arms to a third party before obtaining a permit to do so under the provisions of article 5 of this Law.

The Inspector-General of Police and Customs may decide to issue a licence for the possession of firearms to clubs and organizations whose activities require the use of firearms, provided that these arms and the ammunition are entrusted to a person identified by the club or organization to whom a licence for the possession of these arms shall be issued. The use of such arms shall be determined in accordance with conditions and situations established by a decision of the Inspector-General of Police and Customs.

Article 7

A licence to possess firearms shall be valid for five years from the date of issue. It may be renewed, if an application is filed two months before the expiry date. A licence to possess cold steel shall be permanent.

Article 8

The Inspector-General of Police and Customs may deny a licence, shorten its duration, restrict it to specific types of arms, subject it to any condition he may see fit, suspend it temporarily or revoke it for reasons related to public safety or dictated by the public interest.

In the event of a licence being revoked, the person to whom the weapon had been licensed may transfer it to another person who has a licence to possess or trade in arms, within one month from the date on which he was notified of the decision to revoke this licence, unless the decision to revoke the licence had stated that the weapon should be immediately handed over to the police authority with which the licence is registered.

After handing it over, the owner of the weapon may dispose of it within a year from the date on which he was notified of the decision to revoke the licence. If he does not dispose of it during this period, he shall be deemed to have assigned it to the State. The ownership of such arms shall thereby be transferred to the police of the Sultanate of Oman in return for compensation paid to the owner.

Once a licence is temporarily suspended, the weapon must be immediately handed over to the police authority with which it is registered, until a decision on whether or not to revoke the licence is made.

If this is not possible for any of them, the weapon shall be handed over to the police authority with which the licence is registered. The licensee, his heirs or a legal representative shall have the right to dispose of the weapon within one year from the date the licence was considered revoked.

If no action is taken within this period, he shall be deemed to have assigned the weapon to the State. The ownership of such arms shall be transferred to the Omani Royal Police, in return for compensation to be paid to the owner.
