The second paragraph should read as follows:

"The electoral campaign was carried on in an atmosphere of peace and calm. There was keen political rivalry between the main candidates who all campaigned extensively using posters, public meetings, the Press, radio and television. The Mission is pleased to be able to report that all candidates were accorded equal opportunities to campaign and to express their views freely. The Mission received no serious complaints from any of the candidates regarding the campaign. It had the opportunity of discussing this point with representatives of two of the three main candidates and both expressed their complete satisfaction with the conditions in which they had been able to campaign."
