Explanatory memorandum

1. The Council of Europe, its mandate, structure, and membership

The Council of Europe was founded in 1949 as the first European political institution in Europe. The main aims of the Organisation are to achieve greater unity between its member States, through co-operation in all fields except military matters and on the basis of shared values of democracy, human rights and the rule of law. Only European States that respect these principles and that are genuine parliamentary democracies can join the Council of Europe. This implies that they must have a multi-party system and hold free and fair general elections at regular intervals.

The protection of human rights is an indispensable element for the functioning of a democratic and free society. The democratic rights and freedoms developed and protected by the Council of Europe are enshrined in the European Convention on Human Rights of 1950 and its various protocols as well as in other human rights instruments notably the European Social Charter. Other essential human rights instruments are the European Convention for the Prevention of Torture, the Framework Convention on the Protection of National Minorities, as well as various other conventions and recommendations. Together these instruments have a significant impact on the policies of the member states in the areas of democracy and human rights.

The implementation and promotion of these principles constitute the specific mandate and «raison d'être» of the Council of Europe. In its essence, the Council of Europe is an alliance for the defence of these ideals. To that end, it has established a system of collective enforcement of the respect of human rights through mutual control. It also brings its members ever closer together through their equal participation in common activities to promote the implementation of its principles in response to changing challenges.

The Council of Europe covers all major issues facing European society other than defence. Its work programme includes the following fields of activity: human rights, media, legal co-operation, social and economic questions, health, education, culture, heritage, sport, youth, local and regional government and the environment.

The work in these fields has led, inter alia, to the adoption of 174 European conventions and treaties and numerous recommendations to the member states. These instruments form a corpus of harmonised law and legal and administrative procedures, thus creating the necessary administrative, legal and intellectual infrastructure in a united Europe. About 90 conventions are open to non-member states.

Concerning its structure, the Council of Europe is founded on three pillars: intergovernmental, parliamentary and judicial.

The Committee of Ministers, composed of Ministers of Foreign Affairs and their Deputies, is responsible for the intergovernmental activities involving a wide-range of special ministries of member countries, at the level of ministers, senior officials and experts as well as participants from universities and civil society.

The Parliamentary Assembly is composed of pluralist delegations from national parliaments and its deliberations cover all aspects of European co-operation; it plays an increasingly decisive role in the Council of Europe's politics and actions. Elected representatives from local and regional authorities, for their part, work together in the Congress of Local and Regional Authorities of Europe.

The European Court of Human Rights established under the European Convention on Human Rights constitutes the core element of the Council of Europe's judicial pillar. The Court has competence to issue binding judgements on cases submitted to it by member Governments and, more importantly, by persons or groups of persons under the jurisdiction of any of the member States. In addition, a number of other control mechanisms have been established under several European Conventions in such fields as the prevention of torture, social rights, the protection of national minorities, etc.

The enlargement of membership to now forty-one countries and the application for membership by all remaining European countries has extended significantly the geographic area of the Council of Europe by giving it a pan-European dimension. Armenia, Azerbaijan, Bosnia and Herzegovina and Monaco have formally applied for membership to the Council of Europe. The Holy See, the United States of America, Canada, Japan and Mexico have obtained observer status.

2. Background and legal basis for co-operation with the UN

The co-operation between the Council of Europe and the United Nations started in 1951 with the Agreement between the Council of Europe and the Secretariat of the United Nations (15 December 1951).

This Agreement was updated in 1971 through the Arrangement on Co-operation and Liaison between the Secretariats of the Council of Europe and the United Nations (19 November 1971).

The Council of Europe has also concluded agreements with a number of UN bodies and specialised agencies as follows:

- Agreement between the Council of Europe and the International Labour Organisation (23 November 1951), completed by an Arrangement between the ILO and the Council of Europe on the creation and activities of the International Vocational Training Information and Research Centre (November 1962)
- Relations of the Council of Europe with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund - UNICEF (3 July 1952)
- Agreement between the Secretary General of the Council of Europe and the Director of the Regional Office for Europe of the World Health Organisation - WHO (9 September 1952)
- Agreement between the Council of Europe and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation - UNESCO (10 November 1952)
- Agreement between the Council of Europe and the Food and Agriculture Organisation of the United Nations - FAO (11 January 1956).

On 17 October 1989, the United Nations General Assembly adopted a resolution, proposed by a number of Council of Europe member States, granting observer status for the Council of Europe to the General Assembly (Resolution 44/6). Under this Resolution, the Council of Europe is invited to participate in the sessions and work of the General Assembly in the capacity of observer.

Furthermore, in order to update the agreement of 1952, the Secretary General of the Council of Europe and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees signed in 1999 a Memorandum of Understanding on Co-operation between the Council of Europe and the UNHCR.

The Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe

For its part, the Parliamentary Assembly has made its own arrangements for relations with the United Nations as well as with a number of UN bodies (e.g. UNHCR, UNDP, ECE/UN), and specialised agencies (e.g. UNESCO, ILO, IMF and the World Bank). Representatives from these organisations participate regularly in meetings of the committees of the Parliamentary Assembly. Furthermore, the Assembly holds debates at certain intervals on the work of these Organisations.

In this way, the Parliamentary Assembly follows closely the work of the United Nations with a view to formulating policy recommendations to the Committee of Ministers or to Council of Europe member States whenever appropriate.

An example is Recommendation 1408 (1999) on the International Criminal Court (ICC), inviting the member and observer States, inter alia, to ratify as soon as possible the Statute of the ICC, and to make a financial contribution towards the functioning of the Court.

3. Forms of co-operation

The co-operation arrangements between the United Nations and the Council of Europe provides for relations, notably through:

- exchange of documents and publications;
- regular contacts between officials from both sides;
- mutual consultation between both Secretariats on the implementation of programmes;
- attendance by representatives of the UN Secretariat in meetings of organs of the Council of Europe and vice versa,
- inter-Secretariat meetings.

The most relevant areas of co-operation are: human rights, humanitarian issues and refugees, legal questions, social questions, culture and education. The following recent examples may illustrate the Council of Europe's contributions to major tasks or activities carried out by the United Nations.

UNMIK

The crisis in Kosovo prompted the Council of Europe to support the efforts of the United Nations in search of a peaceful settlement and to offer its co-operation, in its fields of competence, to political and institutional reconstruction in the region. The Council of Europe declared its readiness to contribute to the implementation of Resolution 1244 of the United Nations Security Council by establishing close working relations with UNMIK (United Nations Mission in Kosovo) and the other international organisations active in the area.

In 1999, the Council of Europe began working in Kosovo on legislation and reforms to bring it in line with Council of Europe texts such as the European Convention on Human Rights, on restructuring and reforming the judiciary, on the establishment and functioning of self-government, the protection of minorities, property rights and population registration. It was also active in such areas as training programmes, fighting trafficking, childhood and youth programmes, and education policies.

In order to co-ordinate the Council of Europe's activities in Kosovo, a Secretariat Office in Pristina became operational on 23 August 1999 with the purpose of maintaining contacts with UNMIK and its various components, in particular the OSCE, the UNHCR and the European Union.

UN Special Session "Women in 2000"

The Council of Europe participated actively in the Special Session of the General Assembly on "Women in 2000" (New York, 5-9 June 2000), highlighting in particular the Council of Europe's work to combat trafficking in women for sexual exploitation and its activities in favour of gender mainstreaming. Prior to this Special Session, ECOSOC issued a document containing an overview of all Council of Europe activities on gender equality, which was presented to the Regional Preparatory Meeting on the 2000 Review of Implementation of the Beijing Platform for Action (Geneva, 19-21 January 2000).

UN Special Session "Implementation of the outcome of the World Summit for Social Development"

The Organisation participated in a similarly active manner in the Special Session of the General Assembly on the "Implementation of the outcome of the World Summit for Social Development" held in Geneva from 26 to 30 June 2000. The Council of Europe's contribution focused on its strategy for social cohesion, particularly the protection of social rights, access to housing, employment and social protection and family and children policies. The Council of Europe submitted to this Special Session a political message adopted by the Committee of Ministers on 11 May 2000.

In addition to presenting this political message, the Council of Europe organised, prior to this Special Session, an International Conference on "The Dual Challenge of Globalisation and Transition: the Role of Civil Society in Fostering Social Cohesion". The Conference - which was held in the framework of the Council of Europe Campaign "Globalisation without Poverty"- brought together government and civil society representatives and the UN agencies concerned to assess the major policy challenges for improved social development in central and eastern Europe and to strengthen the voice and the role of civil society in transition countries.

2001 World Conference on "Racism, Racial Discrimination, Xenophobia and Related Intolerance"

At the invitation of the European Union, the Council of Europe is co-ordinating European preparations for the World Conference in the form of a pan-European Conference on these topics, to be immediately preceded by a forum for non-governmental organisations. This Conference will be held at the Council of Europe from 11 to 13 October 2000. The United Nations will be invited to participate.

Regular Participation in UN meetings

The Council of Europe participates regularly in the meetings of the Third Committee of the General Assembly (Social, Humanitarian and Cultural Affairs), in the sessions of the Commission on Human Rights, and in the sessions of the Commission on the Status of Women.

Furthermore, the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe organises every year an exchange of views on the United Nations with regard to human rights questions with experts from capitals. This meeting analyses the results of the General Assembly session and prepares for the annual sessions of the UN Commission on Human Rights in Geneva.

4. Practical arrangements for co-operation

Tripartite High-Level and Target-Oriented Meetings

Over recent years, the Council of Europe has been involved in renewed co-operation with the United Nations, mainly in relation with crisis situations in Europe. In 1993, the UN Office in Geneva, the OSCE and the Council of Europe established the practice of holding Tripartite High-Level Meetings to exchange information and to promote co-ordination of activities in areas of common concern. These meetings, which focus on such issues as the reform process in countries of central and eastern Europe, the fight against international crime, racism and intolerance and refugee problems, take place every year and are hosted on a rotating basis.

The last such High-Level Tripartite Meeting took place on 25 February 2000 in Geneva, with the participation of the United Nations, the OSCE, the Council of Europe, the IOM, the ICRC, and the European Commission. It centred on progress towards peace and stability in South Eastern Europe.

Special target-oriented tripartite meetings are also organised, such as the ones on the Caucasian Republics in November 1997, on Albania in April 1998, on the reform of the judicial system in February 1999, and on "Law Enforcement, in particular the Police" in February 2000.

Fourth meeting between the United Nations and the Heads of Regional Organisations

The Council of Europe participated for the first time in a high-level Meeting of Heads of Regional organisations convened by the Secretary General of the United Nations, held in New York, on 28-29 July 1998. The Council of Europe will also contribute to the forthcoming meeting between the United Nations Secretary General and the Heads of Regional Organisations, on the theme of "Co-operation for Peace-Building". These High-Level Meetings allow the Secretary General of the Council of Europe to share the Organisation's expertise with other participants.

United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) Liaison Office

The UNHCR has opened a liaison office in Strasbourg in order to facilitate the close co-operation that has evolved between the Council of Europe and the UNHCR with regard to refugee protection and related issues, in particular human rights and legal standards.

Other forms of contacts

For an overview of all contacts between the United Nations and the Council of Europe in 1999 see Annex I.

5. Conclusion

The Council of Europe, as the only pan-European organisation, is in a position to make a substantial contribution to the United Nations in meeting an increasing number of challenges. The Council can contribute effectively to increase the democratic stability in Europe. It can also substantially contribute in fields where its expertise is well recognised, in particular as regards the building of pluralistic democracies based on the rule of law and respect for human rights. In this way the Council of Europe can enhance, particularly on the European continent, the ideals laid down by the Charter of the United Nations, and also contribute to their promotion in other parts of the world.

At the dawn of the new century, it would seem timely for the General Assembly of the United Nations to examine ways and means of bringing forward already advanced co-operation between the United Nations and the Council of Europe. Consequently it would appear appropriate to authorise the Secretary General to explore - in close consultation with the Council of Europe - all possible means for strengthening relations between the two organisations, and to report back to the General Assembly so that it can decide on suitable means for developing this co-operation.
