Report of the Internal Justice Council

Addendum

I. Introduction

1. The present report is an addendum to the first report of the Internal Justice Council (A/63/489). By its resolution 63/253, the General Assembly decided that three ad litem judges shall be appointed to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal for a period of only one year with effect from 1 July 2009.
2. On 2 March 2009, the General Assembly appointed three full-time judges and two half-time judges to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal, as well as seven judges to the United Nations Appeals Tribunal.
3. In the present report, the Council presents the names of three recommended candidates for appointment as ad litem judges. All the recommended candidates were examined and interviewed by the Council in September 2008 and recommended for appointment as permanent judges of the United Nations Dispute Tribunal, as described in the report of the Council (A/63/489). During interviews with the candidates, the Council discussed the proposal for the appointment of ad litem judges made by the Secretary-General in his report (A/62/782), which was under consideration by the General Assembly.

II. Background

4. Following the adoption by the General Assembly of resolution 63/253, the Council considered the question of identifying suitable candidates to recommend for appointment as ad litem judges. It agreed that all the candidates recommended for appointment to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal and some of the candidates recommended for appointment to the United Nations Appeals Tribunal would be suitable for appointment as ad litem judges.

5. The Council then approached the candidates it considered suitable for appointment as ad litem judges to ascertain whether they would be willing to serve as ad litem judges. Of the 10 candidates who were identified by the Council as suitable and who had confirmed their willingness in serving as ad litem judges, 5 candidates were appointed by the General Assembly on 2 March 2009 to serve either on the United Nations Dispute Tribunal or the United Nations Appeals Tribunal.

6. In reviewing the five remaining candidates, the Council was mindful of its mandate, which includes, inter alia, the decision by the General Assembly in paragraph 37 (b) of its resolution 62/228 that the Council shall give due regard to geographical distribution in making its recommendations. To avoid recommending more than one candidate from the same Member State, the Council has decided to recommend three candidates for appointment as ad litem judges. The Council notes that none of the recommended candidates are from a Member State whose national has already been appointed to the United Nations Dispute Tribunal.

7. The Council also took into account the General Assembly's decision, in paragraph 37 (b) of its resolution 62/228, that the Council "[p]rovide its views and recommendations to the General Assembly on two or three candidates for each vacancy in the United Nations Dispute Tribunal". The Council considers that given the exigent circumstances and the need for the General Assembly to appoint the ad litem judges before 1 July 2009, it would not be desirable to delay the process by advertising to identify additional suitable candidates for the ad litem positions. Accordingly, the Council based its recommendations for ad litem judges on the candidates already identified in its report (A/63/489). Should the General Assembly require additional candidates to be identified, the Council will take the necessary steps to do so.

III. Profiles of recommended candidates

8. The three candidates recommended by the Council for appointment as ad litem judges are listed alphabetically by last name. The curriculum vitae of each candidate is set out in the annex to the present report.

In that court, he has had considerable experience dealing with administrative review matters. This has included cases involving employment. He has also served as a judge of the Court of Appeal of the Solomon Islands since 2005. While a judge, he further served as part-time chairperson of the Law Reform Commission of New South Wales for 10 years. He received his law degree from the University of Sydney in 1968. His first language is English.

Prior to this, he held office as a presiding judge in the Administrative Tribunal of Marseille (2004-2007 and 1998-2002) as well as serving as a judge in various administrative tribunals. He also served as an adviser to the Supreme Administrative Court of Thailand (2002-2003); and as an administrative judge in Papeete, French Polynesia (1991-1992). He obtained a Master's degree in private law from the Faculty of Law of Paris in 1967. His first language is French and he has a good working knowledge of English.

Nkemdilim Amelia Izuako (Nigeria), born in 1953

11. Judge Izuako is currently a high court judge in the Solomon Islands (since May 2008). Previously, she held office as a high court judge in Anambra State in Nigeria (1998-2003), as a high court judge in the Gambia (2004-2006) and as an acting judge on the Gambia Court of Appeal (2004-2006). In both Nigeria and the Gambia, as a judge of a court of general jurisdiction, she had experience in handling labour and administrative law matters. She holds law degrees from the University of Ife, Nigeria (1976 and 1981). Her first language is Igbo and she is fluent in English.

IV. Conclusion

12. The Council notes that the General Assembly has not indicated whether judges appointed on an ad litem basis may be eligible for reappointment for a non-renewable term of seven years on the United Nations Dispute Tribunal. The General Assembly may wish to provide further guidance on this matter.

13. The Council would like to thank the United Nations Secretariat for the outstanding support that it has provided to the Council.

Signed by the members of the Internal Justice Council and submitted to the Secretary-General on 11 March 2009 for transmission to the General Assembly.
