[Original: Arabic]

On instructions from my Government, I should like to convey to you a complaint against the Israeli occupation authorities, which have begun building a racist separation wall in the occupied Syrian Golan.

In June 2011, the Israeli Government decided to build a racist separation wall east of Majdal Shams in the occupied Syrian Golan, allegedly in order to prevent Palestinians and Syrians from crossing the ceasefire line and reaching occupied Majdal Shams. The Israeli Corps of Engineers in fact began constructing the wall at the beginning of this past July, and an agreement was reached with Israeli contractors to build a wall eight metres high and four kilometres long. It should be noted that the ceasefire line between Israel and Syria in the occupied Golan is approximately 100 kilometres long. The Israeli Chief of Staff, Benny Gantz, has ordered that construction of the wall should be completed in September 2011, that is to say, before the United Nations vote concerning recognition of the Palestinian State. Israeli army bulldozers and heavy equipment have been excavating and levelling a strip of land a few metres wide along the ceasefire line next to Majdal Shams, from the Khillat al-Ramlah area in the north to al-Naqaqir in the south.

The wall that Israel has begun building will separate the occupied portions of the Syrian Golan from and break their geographical contiguity with the Syrian homeland. It will also result in the seizure of vast areas of land, estimated to be hundreds of dunums, which belong to Syrian Arab farmers who were deprived of their land when it was appropriated in the mid-1970s. The Israeli army took control of that territory after the conclusion of the 1974 Disengagement Agreement. The land, which is part of the occupied town of Majdal Shams, was used to grow grapevines, wheat, chickpeas, barley, apples, almonds and figs.

The aim of building a wall in the occupied Syrian Golan is to establish a new political and security reality, and it will also serve to impose a specific reality on any future peace negotiations concerning the occupied Golan. This wall will also have an extremely adverse effect on the population of the occupied Golan because it will separate them from and break their geographical contiguity with their homeland, Syria. All this is taking place against the backdrop of Israel's policy of aggression against the people of the Golan, a policy that includes detention, expulsion, exorbitant fines, prosecution and driving workers from their place of employment.

By carrying out such grave acts as modifying the geographic characteristics of the occupied Syrian Golan, in particular the laying of paved and unpaved roads for military use and the construction of a permanent cement wall, the Israeli authorities have violated international law and contravened the Disengagement Agreement between the Syrian and Israeli sides, which was concluded under the auspices of the great Powers and the Security Council. The Syrian Arab Republic insists that the United Nations and, in particular, the Security Council, must shoulder its responsibilities and immediately take all necessary measures to halt this action, which is part of Israel's ongoing campaign to cut off the occupied Syrian Golan from the Syrian homeland. It is a flagrant violation of international law and the relevant United Nations resolutions, in particular Security Council resolution 497 (1981), in which the Council decided that Israel's annexation of the occupied Syrian Golan was null and void and without international legal effect.

Below is a list of the families that own the appropriated land on which the wall is being erected:
