

FILE COPY

REFERENCE AND TERMINOLOGY UNIT
please return to room

UNITED NATIONS

GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Distr.
GENERAL

A/CN.9/332/Add.3
12 April 1990

ORIGINAL: ENGLISH

UNITED NATIONS COMMISSION
ON INTERNATIONAL TRADE LAW
Twenty-third session
New York, 25 June - 6 July 1990

INTERNATIONAL COUNTERTRADE

Draft legal guide on drawing up contracts in international countertrade transactions: sample chapters*

Report of the Secretary-General

Addendum

IV. GENERAL REMARKS ON DRAFTING

Contents

Paragraphs

A. General remarks . . . . .	1 - 9
B. Language . . . . .	10 - 12
C. Parties to transaction . . . . .	13 - 14
D. Notifications . . . . .	15 - 18
E. Definitions . . . . .	19 - 22

A. General remarks

1. A countertrade transaction is usually the result of extensive written and oral communications between the parties. Each party may find it desirable to establish a checklist of the necessary steps to be taken in negotiating and drawing up contracts constituting the transaction (the countertrade agreement and the supply contracts). Such a checklist could reduce the possibility of omissions or errors occurring in the steps taken prior to entering into the contract. A party may also wish to consider seeking legal or technical advice in drawing up the contracts. While countertrade transactions can be expected to become routine for parties experienced in countertrade, even simple countertrade transactions may pose difficulties for newcomers to countertrade calling for legal or technical advice. For complex transactions, even experienced parties may require advice.

* The text contained herein is a first draft prepared by the Secretariat for consideration by the Commission as part of the preparatory work on the draft legal guide on drawing up contracts in international countertrade transactions and should not be regarded as stating the views of the Commission.

2. The process of establishing a countertrade transaction could be facilitated if the parties agree that, before a first draft of the countertrade agreement and any supply contract is prepared, negotiations on the main technical and commercial issues are to take place. Thereafter, one of the parties could be asked to submit a first draft reflecting the agreement reached during the negotiations. A first draft may then be discussed and elaborated, resulting in a preliminary set of contract documents, which, after review and finalization, will govern the relationship between the parties.

3. The legal rules applicable to the countertrade agreement may require that a countertrade agreement be in written form. Even when written form is not required, it is advisable for the parties to express their agreement in writing to avoid later disputes as to what terms were actually agreed upon. If the parties decide that modifications of the countertrade agreement are to be in writing, it is advisable that this be stated in the countertrade agreement.

4. The parties may wish to clarify the relationship between the contract documents, on the one hand, and the oral exchanges, correspondence and draft documents which came about during the negotiations, on the other. The parties may wish to provide that those communications and draft documents are not part of the contract. They may further provide that those communications and draft documents cannot be used to interpret the contract, or, alternatively, that they may be used for this purpose to the extent permitted by the applicable law. Under the law applicable to the contract, oral exchanges and correspondence might in some cases be relevant to the interpretation of the contract even if they occur after the contract is entered into.

5. The parties should ensure that the contract terms as expressed in writing are unambiguous and will not give rise to disputes, and that the relationship between the various documents comprising the transaction is clearly established. Such precision may be of particular importance in countertrade transactions that are carried out over a long period and may have to be administered by persons who have not participated in the negotiations at the outset of the transaction (e.g. buy-back or offset transactions). Each party may find it useful to designate one person to be primarily responsible for supervising the preparation of the contract documents. It is advisable for that person to be a skilled draftsman familiar with international countertrade transactions. To the extent possible, it is advisable for that person to be present during important negotiations. Each party may find it useful to have the final contract documents scrutinized by a team having expertise in the subject-matter reflected in the documents in order to ensure accuracy and consistency of style and content.

6. The applicable legal rules may also contain rules on the interpretation of contracts and presumptions as to the meaning of certain expressions such as "reasonable price" (chapter VI, "Pricing of goods", paragraph 24), "trust" and "compte fiduciaire" (chapter IX, "Payment", paragraph 16), and "penalty" (chapter XI, "Liquidated damages and penalties", paragraph __). The parties are advised to select contract wording in light of the applicable law in order to ensure that the expressions used reflect the intended meaning. One approach is for the applicable law to be determined at a very early stage of the relationship between the parties (e.g., at the commencement of negotiations). The countertrade transaction may then be negotiated and drawn up taking that law into account. Another approach is for the parties to determine the applicable law only after negotiations have taken place on the main technical and commercial issues and have resulted in a measure of accord between the parties. They may thereafter review the first drafts relating to the transaction, which reflect that accord, in the light of the applicable law to ensure that the terms of the draft take account of that law.

7. The parties should take into account the mandatory legal rules of an administrative, fiscal or other public nature in the country of each party that are relevant to the countertrade transaction. They should also take into account such mandatory legal rules in other countries when those rules are relevant to the transaction. Certain rules may concern the technical aspects of the countertrade agreement (e.g., safety standards for the countertrade goods or rules relating to environmental protection), and the terms of the countertrade agreement should not conflict with those rules. Other rules may concern export, import and foreign exchange restrictions (e.g., it may be provided that certain rights and obligations are not to arise until export or import licences, approvals for payments or for the use of particular payment mechanisms have been granted). Legal rules relating to taxation may be a factor, and the parties may wish to include in the countertrade agreement provisions dealing with liability for tax.

8. The parties may wish to consider whether the countertrade agreement is to contain introductory recitals. The recitals may set forth representations made by one or both parties which induced the parties to enter into the agreement. The recitals may also describe the context in which the countertrade agreement was entered into. The extent to which recitals are used in the interpretation of the terms of the agreement introduced by the recitals varies under different legal systems, and their impact on the interpretation may be uncertain. Accordingly, if the contents of recitals are intended to be significant in the interpretation or implementation of the countertrade agreement, it may be preferable to include those contents in the operative provisions of the countertrade agreement.

9. The parties may find it useful to examine standard forms of countertrade agreements, general conditions, standard clauses, or previously concluded countertrade agreements to facilitate the preparation of contract documents. Such an examination may clarify for the parties the issues that should be addressed in their negotiations. However, it is inadvisable to adopt provisions appearing in those documents without critical examination. Those provisions may, as a whole, reflect an undesirable balance of interests, or those provisions may not accurately reflect the terms agreed to by the parties. The parties may find it advisable to compare the approaches adopted in the forms, conditions or countertrade agreements examined by them with the approaches recommended in the present legal guide.

B. Language

10. The contracts constituting the countertrade transaction (i.e., the countertrade agreement and the individual supply contracts) may all be drawn up in only one language version (which may, but need not be, the language of either of the parties), or in the two languages of the parties where those languages differ, or the countertrade agreement may be drawn up in one language and the supply contracts in another language. Where the conclusion of the countertrade agreement precedes the conclusion of the supply contracts in the two directions (chapter III, "Contracting approach", paragraph 19), or where it precedes the conclusion of the counter-export contract (chapter III, paragraphs 12 to 18), it is advisable that the countertrade agreement specify the language of the contracts. The specification of the language before the commencement of negotiations on a supply contract may facilitate preparations of the parties for the negotiations and avoid a disagreement.

11. Drawing up a contract in only one language version will reduce conflicts of interpretation in regard to its provisions. Drawing up all the contracts constituting the countertrade transaction in the same language will reduce conflicts between two contracts of related content. On the other hand, each party may understand its rights and obligations more easily if one version of the contract is in its language. In addition, where extensive or complex working instructions to personnel of one or both parties are derived directly from the contract, it may be of particular importance that the contract is in the language in which the instructions are to be given. If only one language is to be used, the parties may wish to take the following factors into account in choosing that language: that it is advisable for the language chosen to be understood by the senior personnel of each party who will be implementing the contract; that it might be advisable for the contract to be in a language commonly used in international commerce; that the settlement of disputes is likely to be facilitated if the language chosen is the language in which proceedings would be conducted or if the language chosen is the language or one of the languages of the country of the applicable law.

12. If the parties do not draw up the contracts in a single language version, it is advisable to specify in the contracts which language version is to prevail in the event of a conflict between the two versions. For example, if the negotiations were conducted in one of the languages, the parties may wish to provide that the version in the language of the negotiations is to prevail. A provision that one of the language versions is to prevail might induce both parties to clarify as far as possible the prevailing language version. The parties may wish one language version to prevail in respect of certain segments of the transaction or in respect of certain contract documents (e.g. countertrade agreement or technical documents related to the countertrade agreement or a supply contract) and another language version in respect of the remainder of the contracts or documents. Where the parties provide that both language versions are to have equal status, the parties should attempt to provide guidelines for the settlement of a conflict between the two language versions. The parties may provide, for example, that the agreement is to be interpreted according to practices that the parties have established between themselves and usages regularly observed in international trade with respect to the agreement in question. The parties may also wish to provide that where a term of the contract in one language version is unclear, the corresponding term in the other language version may be used to clarify that term.

C. Parties to transaction

13. Where a contract involved in the transaction (the countertrade agreement or a supply contract) consists of several documents, the parties may wish to identify and describe themselves in a principal document designed to come first in logical sequence among the documents that incorporate that contract. The document should set forth, in a legally accurate form, the names of the parties, indicate their addresses, record the fact that the parties have entered into a contract, briefly describe the subject-matter of the contract, and be signed by the parties. It should also set forth the date on which, and the place where, the contract was signed, and the time when it is to enter into force. Subsequent reference in the contract to the parties may be facilitated if the principal document would specify that in the subsequent text and in the subordinate documents the parties would be referred to by agreed abbreviations or by expressions such as exporter, importer, counter-exporter, counter-importer, trading house. A party may have several addresses (e.g., the address of its head office, the address of a branch through which the contract was negotiated) and it may be preferable to specify in the document the address to which notifications directed to a party should be sent.

14. Parties to countertrade transactions are usually legal entities. In such cases the source of their legal status (e.g. incorporation under the laws of a particular country) may be set out in the contract. There may be limitations on the capacity of legal entities to enter into contracts. Therefore, unless satisfied of the other party's capacity to enter into the contract, each party may wish to require from the other some proof of that capacity. If a party to the contract is a legal entity, the other party may wish to satisfy itself that the official of the entity signing the contract has the authority to bind the entity. If the contract is entered into by an agent on behalf of a principal, the name, address and status of the agent and of the principal may be identified, and evidence of authority from the principal enabling the agent to enter into the contract on its behalf may be annexed.

D. Notifications

15. In a countertrade transaction a party frequently has to notify the other party of certain events or situations. Such notifications may be required, for example, to initiate negotiations for the conclusion of a supply contract, to facilitate cooperation in the performance of the contract, to enable the party to whom notification is given to take action, as the prerequisite to the exercise of a right, or as the means of exercising a right. The parties may wish to address and resolve in their contract certain issues which arise in connection with such notifications.

16. In the interests of certainty, it is desirable to require that all notifications referred to in the countertrade transaction be given in writing, although in certain cases requiring immediate action the parties may wish to provide that notification can be given orally in person or by telephone, to be followed by confirmation in writing. The parties may wish to define "writing" (see paragraph 21 below) and to specify the acceptable means of conveying written notifications (e.g., surface mail, airmail, telex, telegraph, facsimile, electronic data interchange (EDI)). However, care should be taken not to so limit the means of notification that, if the means specified is not available, no valid notification could be given. The parties may also wish to specify the language in which notifications are to be given (e.g., the language of the contract).

17. With regard to the time when a notification is to be effective, two approaches may be considered. One approach is to provide that a notification is effective upon its dispatch by the party giving the notification, or after the lapse of a fixed period of time after the dispatch. Alternatively, the parties may provide that a notice is effective only upon delivery of the notification to the party to whom it is given (see paragraph 21 below). Under the former approach, the risk of a failure to transmit or an error by the transmitting agency in transmission of the notification rests on the party to whom the notification is sent, while under the latter approach it rests on the party dispatching the notification. The parties may find it advantageous to select a means of transmitting the notification which provides proof of the dispatch or delivery, and of the time of dispatch or delivery. Another approach may be to require the party to whom the notification is given to acknowledge receiving the notification. It may be convenient for the contract to contain a general provision to the effect that, unless otherwise specified, one or the other approach with respect to when a notification becomes effective (on dispatch or delivery) is to apply to notifications referred to in the contract. Exceptions to the general approach adopted may be appropriate for certain notifications.

18. The parties may wish to specify the legal consequences of a failure to notify. The parties may also wish to specify the consequences of a failure to respond to a notification that requires a response. For example, when the parties envisage a series of shipments, they may provide that if the supplier notifies the purchaser of a proposed shipment of a given quantity of the goods on a particular date, the purchaser is deemed to have agreed unless an objection is made.

E. Definitions

19. The parties may find it useful to define certain key expressions or concepts that are frequently used in the countertrade agreement or in the supply contract. Definitions are particularly useful in contracts between parties from different countries, even if they use the same language, because of the increased possibility that certain expressions or concepts may be used differently in the two countries. Definitions are also useful when the contracts are in two languages since they tend to reduce the likelihood of errors in translation. A definition ensures that the expression or concept defined is understood in the same sense whenever it is used in the agreement or the contract, and dispenses with the need to clarify the intended meaning of the expression or concept on each occasion that it is used. A definition is advisable if an expression which needs to be used is ambiguous. Such definitions are sometimes made subject to the qualification that the expressions defined bear the meanings assigned to them, "unless the context otherwise requires". Such a qualification takes into account the possibility that an expression which has been defined has inadvertently been used in a context in which it does not bear the meaning assigned to it in the definition. The preferable course is for the parties to scrutinize the contract carefully to ensure that the expressions defined bear the meanings assigned to them wherever they occur, thereby eliminating the need for such a qualification.

20. Since a definition is usually intended to apply throughout an agreement or contract, a list of definitions may be included in the controlling document. Where, however, an expression that needs to be defined is used only in a particular provision or a particular section of the agreement or contract, it may be more convenient to include a definition in the provision or section in question.

21. Expressions such as "countertrade agreement", "writing", "dispatch of notification", and "delivery of notification" may be defined. The parties may wish to consider the following examples:

Countertrade agreement. "Countertrade agreement" consists of the following documents, and has that meaning in all the said documents:
(a) the present document; (b) list of possible countertrade goods;
(c) ... .

Writing. "Writing" includes statements contained in a telex, telefax, telegram or other means of telecommunication which provides a record of the content of such statements.

Dispatch of a notification. "Dispatch of a notification" by a party occurs when it is properly addressed and conveyed to the appropriate entity for transmission by a mode authorized under the contract.

Delivery of a notification. "Delivery of a notification" to a party occurs when it is handed over to that party, or when it is left at an address of that party at which, under the contract, the notification may be left, irrespective of whether the notification is brought to the attention of the individual responsible to act on the notification.

22. The parties may find it useful, when formulating their own definitions, to consider the descriptions contained in the present guide of the various concepts commonly used in countertrade transactions. Those descriptions can be located by the use of the index to this guide. [Note to the Commission: it is suggested that, after the legal guide has been written, an index should be prepared.]