6. At its 2nd meeting, on 2 May 2018, the Working Group considered agenda item 2, entitled “Practical measures under the Firearms Protocol that contribute to preventing criminal organizations and terrorist groups from acquiring weapons through illicit trafficking, and to monitoring the achievement of target 16.4 of the Sustainable Development Goals.”

7. The discussion about agenda item 2 was facilitated by Belala Djilali, General Prosecutor of the People’s Democratic Republic of Algeria, on behalf of the African States; Fabio Marini, Principal Administrator in the Directorate General, Migration and Home Affairs, European Commission, on behalf of the European Union; José Romero Morgaz, Lieutenant Colonel of the Guardia Civil of Spain, Head of Unit of the Central Division Firearms and Explosives of the Ministry of Interior of Spain and Driver EMPACT FIREARMS, on behalf of the Western European and other States; and Marcus Vinicius da Silva Dantas, Federal Police Commissioner of Brazil, Division for the Repression of Crime against the Property and Trafficking in Firearms, on behalf of the Group of Latin American and Caribbean States.

8. The panellist for the African Group held a presentation about the experience of his country in responding to the links between illicitly trafficked firearms, organized crime and the commission of terrorism offences. Such responses included the investigation of the source and recipients of illicitly-trafficked firearms and related prosecutions, the adoption of appropriate legislation, including criminal provisions, in accordance with the Firearms Protocol, enhanced border control and judicial cooperation with international and regional organizations and with neighbouring countries. He called for enhanced international cooperation and encouraged other States to adopt adequate legislation in order to implement the provisions of the Firearms Protocol.

9. The panellist for the European Union described the actions undertaken at EU level in order to address the links between illicit arms trafficking and other crimes, and referred in particular to three fundamental elements related to their implementation of the Firearms Protocol. First, he mentioned the revision of relevant legislation in order to make stricter the marking of weapons and essential components manufactured in the EU, as well as the access to other types of weapons, including appropriate definitions, and the introduction of technical standards for deactivation of weapons. Second, he highlighted the importance of having enhanced law enforcement cooperation, with EU Member States as well as neighbouring and other strategic countries. Lastly, he emphasized the importance of research into firearms trafficking within the European Union and the exchange of information among EU Member States, for which a better use of existing databases was necessary, and underlined that EU has started to enhance the latter together with strategic partners such as the UNODC and the Flemish Peace Institute inter alia.

10. The panellist for the Western European and other States spoke about the implementation of the European EMPACT (European Multidisciplinary Platform Against Criminal Threats) FIREARMS efforts, from the experience of his country as well as in the European Union context. In this regard, he explained what the EMPACT platform consisted of as well as its focus, which was to counter the threat of serious and organized crime, and highlighted the importance of coordination with all relevant actors. He discussed the priority areas for action that have been identified, such as the diversion of firearms into the black market, the cooperation with Member States within the Union and with third countries, in particular the Balkans, and MENA countries, countering the threat posed by deactivated weapons as well as the illicit conversion of weapons. Moreover, the panellist provided examples of relevant law enforcement operations and emphasized the importance of collecting, gathering and producing data and intelligence. He stressed the importance of establishing National Focal Points to facilitate and enhance the cooperation, and the importance of multidisciplinary interventions, ranging from legislative reviews, to research, data collection and analysis, and cooperation at all levels.

11. The panellist for the Group of Latin American and Caribbean States highlighted the interconnectedness between firearms trafficking and organized crime and gave a presentation about the experience of his country in combating firearms trafficking, including on regional cooperation and cooperation with strategic countries, best practices regarding the identification and marking of weapons and ammunition acquired by public forces, the importance of mutual legal assistance for the formal collection of evidence, border inspection and the use of surveillance technology. Moreover, underscoring the importance of tracing firearms and analysing the tracing results, the panellist spoke about the creation of the Federal Police National Tracing Centre and said that developing new ways of effectively marking firearms remains one of the main challenges of the firearms industry. The panellist further stressed the importance of ensuring centralized data and information on seized and surrendered arms, and to conduct thorough data analysis to better understand the phenomenon and devise tailored investigative and operational responses to these threats.

12. Following their presentations, the panellists exchanged further information with delegates at the meeting, based on several questions and comments. Among the main issues raised, it was said that further training and capacity-building for practitioners, experts and authorities was needed in relation to investigation and tracing, and it was noted that UNODC had already been conducting efforts in this regard, which needed to be further stepped up.

13. The importance of harmonizing legislation regionally, internationally and/or with strategic countries was highlighted, in order to facilitate and strengthen international judicial cooperation; it was also noted that, even where countries did not have the same crime typology in their legislation, other offences and/or the Firearms Protocol could be used in order to carry out international cooperation. The importance of establishing national focal points and of having standardized structures in each country in order to facilitate such cooperation was also stressed. Moreover, effective border control was identified as a key measure to prevent and counter the illicit trafficking in firearms, particularly also outside of official border-crossing points.
