On 20 August, in consultations of the whole, the Assistant Secretary-General briefed the Council on the latest activities of UNIFIL. Council members expressed strong support for the important role that UNIFIL continues to play in contributing to peace and stability in southern Lebanon, underlined their concern over all violations of resolution 1701 (2006), including those described in the letter dated 6 August 2009 from the Secretary-General addressed to the President of the Security Council (S/2009/407), and agreed that all parties should fulfil their obligations under that resolution.

Thematic debates and other issues

Children and armed conflict

On 4 August, the Council unanimously adopted resolution 1882 (2009) on children and armed conflict. By the resolution it expanded the criteria under which armed groups can be included in annexes to the reports of the Security General on children and armed conflict, namely, those parties to armed conflict that engage, in contravention of applicable international law, in patterns of killing and maiming of children and/or rape or sexual violence committed against children. In addition, the Council asked the Secretary-General to provide dedicated administrative support to the Working Group.

Peacekeeping

On 5 August, the Council held an open debate on peacekeeping, attended by some 20 force and police commanders of United Nations peacekeeping missions.

The Under-Secretaries-General for Peacekeeping Operations and Field Support, Alain Le Roy and Susana Malcorra, briefed the Council on their non-paper entitled “A new partnership agenda: charting a new horizon for United Nations peacekeeping”, the result of their joint review of the United Nations peacekeeping system. The Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations emphasized the need for a successful transition from peacekeeping to peacebuilding and called for consensus on complex issues, including a robust approach to peacekeeping and the implementation of mandates for the protection of civilians. He reiterated the Secretariat’s commitment to improving consultations with troop- and police-contributing countries, information-sharing with Council members and better monitoring and evaluation of missions. The Under-Secretary-General for Field Support introduced a field support strategy promising greater efficiency and shorter and more localized procurement, among other ideas to improve logistical support. Both reiterated the status of their work — as non-papers containing potential proposals intended to inspire greater dialogue among Member States. The Force Commander, of the African Union-United Nations Hybrid Operation in Darfur (UNAMID), General Martin Luther Agwai, briefed the Council drawing on insights from his experience in the field, and emphasized that UNAMID had at its heart the full range of complex issues.

In the debate that followed there was a broad consensus among the Member States on issues concerning the United Nations peacekeeping mechanisms. Speakers supported measures to improve consultation with troop- and police-contributing countries, monitoring and evaluation of missions and the need for clear and achievable mandates. Participants underlined their wide support for the reform initiatives and looked forward to further discussion of the New Horizon project, including in the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations. Many supported efforts to improve the transition to peacebuilding.

Following the debate, the Council adopted a statement by the President of the Council (S/PRST/2009/24) in which it emphasized the central importance of a partnership drawing together the contributions and commitment of the entire United Nations system, and the importance of viewing a peacekeeping operation as an accompaniment, rather than an alternative, to a political strategy. The Council drew attention to recent endeavours to improve its contribution to the peacekeeping partnership, identifying several areas where further reflection is required to improve the preparation, planning, monitoring, evaluation and completion of peacekeeping operations. The Council committed itself to reviewing progress against these objectives again early in 2010.

Women and peace and security

On 7 August, the Council held an open debate on women and peace and security. The Secretary-General briefed the Council on his follow-up report (S/2009/362) to resolution 1820 (2008). He recalled the recommendations that were made to the Council in his report and underlined the importance of a multisectoral response to conflict-related sexual violence, and enhanced United Nations coordination in the field to prevent continued impunity of the perpetrators of such acts. He advised that an independent commission of inquiry should report to the Council in order to ensure accountability.

Twenty-nine non-members of the Council contributed to the debate; all spoke in favour of enhanced Security Council and United Nations activity to address the issue of gender-based sexual violence within armed conflict and peacebuilding zones.

Non-proliferation/Democratic People's Republic of Korea

On 20 August, Fazli Çorman (Turkey), in his capacity as Acting Chairman of the Committee established pursuant to resolution 1718 (2006), delivered the regular 90-day report on the Committee's work for the period up to 14 August. His report highlighted the adoption on 12 June of resolution 1874 (2009) and the new measures that resulted from it, including the designation on 16 July of additional entities, goods and individuals subject to sanctions; the agreement to continue to work to designate further goods and identify entities that are acting on behalf of or at the direction of previously designated entities; the adoption of a broad-ranging programme of work covering compliance, investigations, outreach and implementation assistance; the increasing number of reports from Member States on steps taken to implement the resolution; and the appointment on 12 August by the Secretary-General of the seven-strong Panel of Experts to support the Committee's work. He also noted that, after the report had been adopted, the Committee had received a letter from a Member State which reported a possible sanctions violation and requested advice on how to proceed. The Committee members were currently considering their response. He explained that it would be covered in detail in the next 90-day report.

Member States reaffirmed their support for full implementation of resolutions 1718 (2006) and 1874 (2009), underlined the need for the Committee to be active, especially in responding to alleged violations of the relevant measures, and stressed the goal of the return of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to peaceful dialogue leading to the denuclearization of the Korean peninsula.
