Some members expressed their deep concern at the seriousness of the situation in the country and strongly condemned violence against civilians and attacks on State institutions and law-enforcement personnel. Members of the Security Council called on all actors in the Democratic Republic of the Congo to refrain from committing acts of violence and called on the Government to ensure the protection of civilians and to engage in dialogue and reconciliation in the Kasai provinces. At the end of the consultations, the members of the Council agreed on elements for the press to summarize their statements.

On 11 July, the Security Council held a briefing, followed by closed consultations, on the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (MONUSCO). The Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, Jean-Pierre Lacroix, delivered a briefing on the situation on the ground, saying that overcoming the current political impasse, rising insecurity and worsening humanitarian conditions would require the concerted effort of the Government in Kinshasa as well as regional and international actors, emphasizing the vital role of MONUSCO.

The representative of the Democratic Republic of the Congo briefed the members of the Council on the efforts of the Government to implement the 31 December political agreement and the adoption of measures to punish perpetrators. Members of the Council expressed their concern about the violence in the Kasai provinces and pointed out that armed groups have been the main cause of the instability in the country. Several members insisted that the Government should hold free, fair and inclusive elections by the end of 2017, and without further delay. Several members of the Council also stressed the need to advance preparations for the election. There were also delegations that emphasized the progress in the review of electoral register, national ownership of electoral process as well as the need to respect Congolese sovereignty.

On 26 July, the Security Council adopted a presidential statement (S/PRST/2017/12) on the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

Central African Republic

On 13 July, the Security Council issued a presidential statement (S/PRST/2017/9) strongly condemning the violence by armed groups in the Central African Republic. In the statement, the Council took note of the outcomes of the meeting of the Central African Republic partners held in Brussels on 21 June, and welcomed the agreement to develop a joint road map to continue the mediation with the armed groups under the leadership of the Government, in partnership with the African Initiative for Peace and Reconciliation as well as international partners.

On 24 and 26 July, the Security Council issued two press statements on attacks against the United Nations Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in the Central African Republic (MINUSCA).

On 27 July, the Security Council heard briefings under the item entitled “Other matters” from the Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations on the work of MINUSCA and on recent developments with regard to the situation in the Central African Republic. The members of the Council condemned, in the strongest terms, the attack on MINUSCA peacekeepers in Bangassou (Mbomou prefecture) on 25 July by suspected anti-Balaka elements, which resulted in the death of two Moroccan peacekeepers and injury to another Moroccan peacekeeper, who also died two days after the attack. The Council agreed that, as the next step, the President of the Council would contact the Permanent Mission of the Central African Republic and convey its message to the authorities of the Central African Republic regarding the need to resolutely engage in the relaunch of the peace and reconciliation process as the best way to avoid attacks against MINUSCA in the future.

West Africa

On 13 July, the Security Council was briefed by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for West Africa, Mohamed Ibn Chambas, also Head of the United Nations Office for West Africa and the Sahel (UNOWAS), on the recent situation in West Africa and the Sahel region. The Special Representative also presented the most recent report of the Secretary-General on the work of UNOWAS (S/2017/563). The briefing was followed by closed consultations. During the consultations, the members of the Council stressed that countries of the region faced enormous challenges, and it was thus of great importance to continue close cooperation with regional organizations such as the African Union, the Economic Community of West African States, the Lake Chad Basin Commission and the Mano River Union, as well as other subregional groups.

On 24 July, the Security Council welcomed recent positive political developments in some West African countries, commending the work of the Special Representative as well as UNOWAS, and expressed concern over the threat of terrorism in the region, including attacks by Boko Haram and Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant (ISIL/Da’esh) and the humanitarian situation, by issuing a presidential statement (S/PRST/2017/10) on the situation of West Africa.

On 24 July, the Security Council adopted a presidential statement (S/PRST/2017/11) on the Liberia peacebuilding plan and upcoming presidential elections.

South Sudan

On 20 July, the Security Council held a briefing, followed by closed consultations, on the situation in South Sudan as well as on the United Nations Mission in South Sudan (UNMISS). The Assistant Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, El-Ghassim Wane, and the Chairperson of the Joint Monitoring and Evaluation Commission, His Excellency Festus Mogae, briefed the Council by videoconference.

Mr. Wane briefed the Council on the Secretary-General's 30-day report on South Sudan, as well as on the situation there. He encouraged the Council to once again express its full support for the revitalization process led by the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD), and to urge all stakeholders in South Sudan to embrace it, and underlined the importance of unity of purpose within the region, adding that the international community must send a strong message to South Sudanese leaders on all sides that the status quo was unacceptable and unsustainable.

Mr. Mogae briefed the Council on his consultations with critical stakeholders. He called on the United Nations, the African Union and IGAD to speak in one voice in their engagement with South Sudan and to encourage the parties in South Sudan to show willingness to compromise and accommodate each other.

The representative of South Sudan emphasized that the work of the National Dialogue was under way and was progressing well, and that the Government of National Unity had the political will and desire to continue to work closely with UNMISS and humanitarian actors to address any pending issues. The representative also urged the international community to honour their pledges to aid South Sudan.

Council members stressed that they had shown their support for the efforts of IGAD and the African Union, and emphasized that a political solution was the only way out of the conflict, which was one of causes of the humanitarian crisis in the world's newest nation.

During the closed consultations, some members of the Council expressed serious concerns about the delays in the implementation of the Agreement on the Resolution of the Conflict in the Republic of South Sudan because of the limitations imposed on the work of UNMISS as a result of the difficulties in accessing humanitarian aid, and some members emphasized the need to propose sanctions. Other members recognized the existing political, economic and humanitarian problems, but considered it necessary to emphasize the positive developments. The Council agreed on calling for an end to the violence and urging the international community to support the Transitional Government.

Mr. Kafando reported on his June visit to Burundi, and emphasized the crucial need for the Government to allow the involvement of the opposition, both in exile and inside Burundi, in the ongoing dialogue led by the East African Community. Mr. Kafando stressed that the Arusha Agreement must remain the cornerstone of all efforts, as well as the importance of calm collective action on the part of African leaders, including those within the subregion, and by the United Nations.

Mr. Lauber reported on his recent visit to the country, and emphasized that the mediation efforts being undertaken by President Yoweri Museveni and former President Benjamin Mkapa on behalf of the East African Community deserve full political and technical support. He called on the international community to continue to follow developments in Burundi and to take all aspects of the current situation into account, and suggested that the Peacebuilding Commission and the Peacebuilding Fund should support the efforts in this area.

The representative of Burundi stressed that the country was calm in general, emphasized that the inter-Burundian dialogue remained on track and was not at a standstill, as some had suggested, that the domestic process had ended and that the final report submitted to the national authorities contained recommendations arising from discussions with more than 26,000 Burundians.

Council members, who noted that the security situation in the country had remained generally calm, stressed, nevertheless, that the prevailing situation in Burundi had seriously undermined the significant gains achieved through the Arusha Agreement, commended regional efforts to help Burundians find political solutions, reiterated their support for the facilitation led by former President Benjamin Mkapa, under the mediation of President Yoweri Museveni, in his capacity as Chair of the East African Community, and welcomed the active engagement of the Peacebuilding Commission as a viable platform for dialogue between Burundi and its partners.

led political dialogue, welcomed the appointment of the new Special Representative of the Secretary-General, Ghassan Salamé, and looked forward to supporting his efforts to facilitate a political solution in Libya.

Peace and security in Africa

On 19 July, the Council held an open debate on “Peace and security in Africa: enhancing African capacities in the areas of peace and security”. The Council was briefed by the Secretary-General and the African Union Commissioner for Peace and Security, Smaïl Chergui. The Secretary-General said that the United Nations and the African Union had a shared interest in strengthening mechanisms to defuse conflicts before they escalated, and in managing them effectively when they occurred. He said, with the 19 April signing of the Joint United Nations-African Union Framework for an Enhanced Partnership in Peace and Security, the two organizations sought to systematically work on the basis of mutual respect and comparative advantage in all stages of the conflict cycle. The Secretary-General also said that enhancing African capacities in peace and security required adequate, timely and predictable financing for the peace support operations of the African Union. Recalling the decision by African leaders, outlined in Council resolution 2320 \(2016\), to fund 25 per cent of those operations, he said that his report submitted pursuant to that text had included financing options.

The African Union Commissioner for Peace and Security said that his organization had mandated or authorized the deployment of more than 100,000 uniformed and civilian personnel over the last decade, a deployment that had come at a huge human cost. African troops had suffered owing to inadequate force enablers and multipliers, and gaps in the provision of financial resources. To support the capacity of African troops, he recommended that the African Union Commission and the United Nations Secretariat establish an approach that involved real-time consultations, joint assessments and joint analysis, with a view to recommending coherent options. He stressed that the operational readiness of the African Stand-by Force must be fully supported.

In the ensuing debate, speakers highlighted the many theatres in which African troops were taking charge of conflict response, notably in the Central African Republic, Mali and Somalia, or were involved in regional efforts to tackle the evolving threats of piracy, cybercrime, terrorism and trafficking in humans or small arms and light weapons. Consensus was reached by the speakers that deeper cooperation between United Nations and the African Union needed to be enhanced to help promote the peacekeeping operations of the African Union. Many speakers also lamented that a lack of financing had limited the efforts of the African Union, citing Council resolution 2320 \(2016\) reaffirming the Council’s determination to enhance peace and security cooperation between the two organizations. Some called for a successor resolution to establish a principle whereby peace operations would be financed through assessed contributions to the United Nations budget. Several speakers applauded the efforts of the African Union to take charge of the future, with the approval of a funding model for its new Peace Fund at the twenty-seventh Summit of the African Union held on 17 and 18 July 2016 in Kigali.

She said that the investigation of the 4 April attack in Khan Shaykhun conducted by the OPCW fact-finding mission had concluded that a large number of people, some of whom had died, had been exposed to sarin or a sarin-like substance used as a chemical weapon. Explaining the reason why the fact-finding mission did not visit the site of the incident, Ms. Nakamitsu said that “security risks outweighed benefits”. Final substantive reports are expected in October. The Head of the Joint Investigative Mechanism said that the Mechanism had begun an investigation into the incidents involving the use of chemicals as weapons in two incidents: in Um-Housh (on 16 September 2016) and Khan Shaykhun. Ms. Mueller said that under the United Nations June/July plan, the Organization had, thus far, reached just over a third of the 1 million people who were targeted, citing a number of continuing obstacles of different types. She said that, in spite of those challenges, and the high threat to humanitarian workers, the United Nations and its partners continued to implement humanitarian operations in the Syrian Arab Republic.
