Principle 1. Official statistics provide an indispensable element in the information system of a democratic society, serving the Government, the economy and the public with data about the economic, demographic, social and environmental situation. To this end, official statistics that meet the test of practical utility are to be compiled and made available on an impartial basis by official statistical agencies to honour citizens' entitlement to public information.

Principle 2. To retain trust in official statistics, the statistical agencies need to decide according to strictly professional considerations, including scientific principles and professional ethics, on the methods and procedures for the collection, processing, storage and presentation of statistical data.

Principle 3. To facilitate a correct interpretation of the data, the statistical agencies are to present information according to scientific standards on the sources, methods and procedures of the statistics.

Principle 4. The statistical agencies are entitled to comment on erroneous interpretation and misuse of statistics.

Principle 5. Data for statistical purposes may be drawn from all types of sources, be they statistical surveys or administrative records. Statistical agencies are to choose the source with regard to quality, timeliness, costs and the burden on respondents.

Principle 6. Individual data collected by statistical agencies for statistical compilation, whether they refer to natural or legal persons, are to be strictly confidential and used exclusively for statistical purposes.

Appendix

International Guiding Principles on Alternative Development

A. General provisions

1. Alternative development policies are an important component of enhancing development in States affected by, or in some cases at risk of, the illicit cultivation of crops used for illicit drug production and manufacture, and play an important role in national, regional and international development policies and in comprehensive policies of poverty reduction and cooperation.

2. Alternative development, as an integral component of policies and programmes for reducing drug production, is an important, viable and sustainable option for preventing, eliminating or significantly and measurably reducing the illicit cultivation of crops used for the production and manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances through tackling poverty and providing livelihood opportunities.

3. Alternative development, including in some cases preventive alternative development, constitutes an international policy founded on the principle of shared and common responsibility that seeks to discourage the cultivation of illicit crops in countries affected by that problem and in those countries which are vulnerable to illicit activities.

4. Alternative development, which includes, as appropriate, preventive alternative development strategies and programmes, should be formulated and implemented by taking into account the vulnerability and specific needs of the communities and groups affected by illicit cultivation of crops used for drug production and manufacture, within the broader framework of national policies.

5. Effective alternative development strategies and programmes require, as appropriate, the strengthening of relevant governmental institutions at the national, regional and local levels. Public policies should be supported to the extent possible by, inter alia, strengthening legal frameworks, involving local communities and relevant organizations, identifying and providing adequate financial support, technical assistance and increased investment, and recognizing and enforcing property rights, including access to land.

6. Local communities and relevant organizations should be involved in the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of all alternative development programmes in order to truly reflect the needs of targeted communities.

7. Civil society can contribute significantly to the formulation of effective and sustainable alternative development programmes, and its active participation should therefore be encouraged in all phases of alternative development programmes.

8. An integrated and complementary approach to alternative development programmes and strategies is crucial and should be implemented in concert with broader drug control policies, including demand reduction, law enforcement, illicit crop elimination and awareness-raising, taking into account demographic, cultural, social and geographic considerations, as appropriate, and in line with the three drug control conventions.

9. States should ensure the proper and coordinated sequencing of development interventions when designing alternative development programmes, and in that regard should take into account issues related to the establishment of agreements and viable partnerships with small producers, favourable climatic conditions, strong political support and adequate market access.

10. Alternative development programmes in the areas where crops are cultivated for illicit drug production and manufacture should be undertaken with a clear understanding of the overall objectives, as appropriate, of eliminating or significantly and measurably reducing the supply of drugs while promoting comprehensive development and social inclusion, alleviating poverty and strengthening social development, the rule of law, security and stability at the country and regional levels, taking into account the promotion and protection of human rights.

11. Alternative development programmes should include measures to protect the environment at the local level, according to national and international law and policies, through the provision of incentives for conservation, proper education and awareness programmes so that the local communities can improve and preserve their livelihoods and mitigate negative environmental impacts.

12. Alternative development programmes, including, as appropriate, preventive alternative development programmes, should be designed to address subregional and regional needs and should be integrated, when circumstances require, into broader regional, subregional and bilateral treaties and arrangements.

13. International cooperation, coordination and stakeholder ownership are essential for the successful implementation and sustainability of alternative development programmes. Alternative development should be considered by all parties involved as a long-term commitment whose results may require time to attain.

14. International cooperation programmes aimed at alternative development should take into account the experiences of different countries, including with regard to South-South cooperation, should draw on best practices and lessons learned in alternative development programmes and projects and should take into account the available financial and technical support provided by donors.

15. Alternative development policies, as one of the tools available in the fight against the world drug problem, should be implemented alongside efforts made by States to strengthen the rule of law and promote health, safety and security so as to ensure a comprehensive approach to tackling the challenges that may be posed by the possible links between drug trafficking, corruption and different forms of organized crime and, in some cases, terrorism.

16. Alternative development can be an integral element of an overall development strategy and should complement economic efforts in the fight against poverty.

17. The impact of alternative development programmes should be assessed by taking into account their contribution to the control of illicit crop cultivation, including the eradication of such crops, and through estimates based on human development indices, socioeconomic and environmental indicators and impartial and accurate evaluations.

B. Actions and implementation measures

18. States Members of the United Nations, international organizations, regional organizations, development agencies, donors and international financial institutions, as well as civil society, should apply their utmost efforts, as appropriate:

(d) To develop policies and programmes that take into account an evidence- and science-based assessment of the potential impact of alternative development on the illicit cultivation of crops used for the illicit production and manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, and on rural and socioeconomic development, including the gender dimension related thereto, and the environment;

(e) To take into account the need to promote the diversification of licit crops cultivated and licit economic activities undertaken when implementing alternative development programmes;

(h) To provide, within a holistic and integrated development approach, essential basic services and legal livelihood opportunities to the communities affected by, or in some cases vulnerable to, illicit crop cultivation;

(i) To recognize that alternative development, including, as appropriate, preventive alternative development, requires the implementation of articulated short-, medium- and long-term plans and actions from all relevant stakeholders to promote positive and sustainable socioeconomic changes in the affected and, in some cases, vulnerable areas;

(j) To promote coordination and encourage alternative development programmes which contain complementary measures at the local, regional and national levels;

(k) To ensure, when considering crop control measures, that small-farmer households have opportunities for viable and sustainable licit livelihoods so that the measures may be properly sequenced in a sustainable fashion and appropriately coordinated, taking into account the circumstances of the region, country or area concerned;

(l) To ensure that programmes or projects related to alternative development effectively discourage the illicit cultivation of crops used for the illicit production and manufacture of drugs;

(m) To also ensure that drug control programmes are implemented in a comprehensive and balanced manner, so as to avoid the shifting of illicit crop cultivation domestically, as well as from one country or region to another;

(n) To respect the legitimate interests and specific needs of the local affected and, in some cases, vulnerable population when designing and implementing alternative development programmes;

(o) To address basic human needs, in full conformity with the three drug conventions and relevant human rights instruments, in order to promote the welfare of targeted communities;

(s) To promote the strengthening of the justice and security sectors and social development, as well as institutional legal frameworks and anti-corruption measures, in a manner conducive to enhancing alternative development efforts;

(t) To promote governance capabilities, when appropriate, in order to strengthen the rule of law, including at the local level;

(u) To ensure that measures aimed at strengthening the rule of law are included in development-oriented drug control policies in order to, inter alia, support farmers in their efforts to stop, and in some cases prevent, the cultivation of illicit crops;

(v) To apply, in addition to estimates of illicit cultivation and other illicit activities related to the world drug problem, indicators related to human development, socioeconomic conditions, rural development and the alleviation of poverty, as well as institutional and environmental indicators, when assessing alternative development programmes in order to ensure that the outcomes are in line with national and international development objectives, including the Millennium Development Goals, and that they reflect accountable use of donor funds and truly benefit the affected communities;

(w) To utilize objective impact evaluations that examine a broad range of social, economic and environmental factors and incorporate the lessons learned from these evaluations in future projects to ensure that the design and implementation of alternative development programmes are based on a reliable and evidence-based evaluation and thorough analysis of local socioeconomic, geographical and cultural realities, as well as the assessment of benefits and risks;

(x) To undertake further research and strengthen data collection with a view to providing a basis for more effective and evidence-based alternative development programmes, as well as conduct research to assess the factors leading to the illicit cultivation of drug crops used for the production and manufacture of narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances;

(y) To utilize data and conduct analysis to identify areas, communities and affected populations that are vulnerable to illicit cultivation and its related illicit activities, and tailor the implementation of programmes and projects to address identified needs;

(z) To encourage partners in cross-border alternative development activities to consider measures to support the implementation of alternative development strategies and programmes, which may include special preferential policies, protection of property rights and facilitation of the import and export of products, in accordance with relevant international law, including trade agreements;

(aa) To enhance technical support, including exchange of expertise, best practices and resources, while seeking to secure long-term flexible funding for alternative development programmes in order to ensure their sustainability;

(bb) To consider the possibility of creating an international fund for alternative development programmes that could be used to face major emergency situations, in order to ensure continuity;

(cc) To recognize that international cooperation resources for the implementation of alternative development programmes should be used in consultation and in coordination with partner countries to support joint efforts to eliminate, reduce and, in some cases, prevent the cultivation of illicit crops through reducing poverty and enhancing rural development in areas affected by, or in some cases vulnerable to, illicit cultivation and engaging in effective law enforcement measures;

(dd) Recognize that long-term cooperation, coordination and the commitment of multilevel and multisectoral stakeholders are essential to a holistic and integrated approach to the effectiveness and sustainability of alternative development programmes;

(ee) Consider voluntary and pragmatic measures in appropriate forums, with a view to enabling alternative development products to gain easier access to international markets, in accordance with applicable multilateral trade rules and treaties and taking into consideration the ongoing negotiation processes in the framework of the World Trade Organization; these might include promoting cost-effective marketing regimes in the field of alternative development, including, as appropriate, preventive alternative development, such as a global stamp for products stemming from alternative development programmes and voluntary certification to support the sustainability of alternative development products;

(ff) Promote, where appropriate, a favourable socioeconomic infrastructure, including the development of roads and transportation networks, the promotion and enhancement of farmer associations, microfinance schemes and schemes aimed at enhancing the effectiveness of the management of available financing resources;

(gg) Combine local wisdom, indigenous knowledge, public-private partnerships and available resources to promote, inter alia, a legal market-driven product development approach when applicable, capacity-building, skills training of the involved population, effective management and the entrepreneurial spirit, in order to support the creation of internal and sustainable commercial systems and a viable value chain at the local level, when applicable;

4. We recognize that investment in science, technology and innovation, and culture can create decent work opportunities, and foster competitiveness, access to information and knowledge, social inclusion and sustained, inclusive and equitable economic growth and affirm that there are different approaches, visions, models and tools available to each country, in accordance with its national circumstances and priorities for achieving sustainable development in its three dimensions, which is our overarching goal. In this regard, we consider green economy in the context of sustainable development and poverty eradication as one of the important tools available for achieving sustainable development and that it could provide options for policymaking but should not comprise a set of rigid rules. We emphasize that it should contribute to eradicating poverty as well as to sustained economic growth, enhancing social inclusion, improving human welfare and creating opportunities for employment and decent work for all, while maintaining the healthy functioning of the Earth's ecosystems. In this regard, we encourage efforts towards achieving a green economy in the context of sustainable development and poverty eradication, as laid out in paragraphs 57-74 in the outcome document of the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development entitled "The future we want".<sup>3</sup>

5. We also recognize that culture is an essential component of sustainable development; represents a source of identity, innovation and creativity for the individual and community; and is an important factor in building social inclusion and eradicating poverty, providing for economic growth and ownership of development processes. We therefore commit to pursuing a more visible and effective integration and mainstreaming of culture into social, environmental and economic development policies and strategies at all levels.

6. We acknowledge the fundamental importance of cultural diversity as a source of enrichment for humankind and a contributor to sustainable development of local communities, peoples and nations, and in this regard recall the principles of the 2001 United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization Universal Declaration on Cultural Diversity.<sup>6</sup>

7. We emphasize that science, technology and innovation should be inclusive and people-centred, benefiting and involving all people, especially the poor and those at risk of having limited access to science, technology and innovation, inter alia, women, children and youth, including by increasing the accessibility of persons with disabilities to goods and services.

8. While welcoming the rising global prosperity powered by science, technology and innovation in the last two decades, we recognize that each country faces specific challenges to advance science, technology and innovation, and underscore the special challenges faced by developing countries, in particular, least developed countries, landlocked developing countries, and small island developing States and African countries, as well as the specific challenges facing the middle-income countries. Countries in situations of conflict also need special attention. In this regard, we emphasize the need to strengthen all forms of international cooperation in science, technology and innovation, and culture.

9. We stress the need to remove the obstacles to the full realization of all rights of people living under foreign occupation, which adversely affect their social and economic development, including their access to science, technology and innovation to promote sustainable development and achievement of the Millennium Development Goals.

10. We also stress the importance of removing obstacles to access to science, technology and innovation to promote sustainable development and achievement of the Millennium Development Goals for people living in areas affected by complex humanitarian emergencies and terrorism.

11. We recognize that current and emerging global challenges on climate change, food security, water, energy, including renewable energy, biodiversity loss, disaster risk reduction and sustainable consumption and production patterns, resource efficiency, chemicals and waste require urgent action based on the best available science, technology and interdisciplinary research.

12. We also recognize that information and communications technologies and broadband connectivity have the potential to provide new solutions to development challenges, and can foster sustained, inclusive and equitable economic growth and sustainable development, competitiveness, access to information and knowledge, poverty eradication and social inclusion which will help to expedite the integration of all countries, especially developing countries, in particular the least developed countries, into the global economy. We reiterate the need to bridge the technology gaps between developed and developing countries, including the digital divide, through appropriate measures, inter alia, overcoming basic infrastructural constraints, including availability, access, affordability and quality of electricity and broadband and mobile services, with particular attention to locally adapted solutions that can be scaled up regionally.

13. We further recognize that gender equality and women's empowerment are important for sustainable development and our common future. In this regard, we welcome the important contribution that women make to all fields of science, technology and innovation, as well as culture, and recognize their work in the full spectrum of professions in these fields.

14. We recognize the need to prioritize international cooperation efforts to adapt and bring to scale all innovative and successful technological solutions that address sustainable development challenges, in particular for developing countries, and acknowledge the important and complementary contribution that entrepreneurship can make in driving innovation. In this regard, we also recognize the important role of greater international cooperation at all levels, with North-South cooperation complemented by South-South cooperation and triangular cooperation.

15. We also recognize the importance of national-, regional- and global-level capacity and institution-building of scientific and technological capacities for sustainable development and tackling inequality and other global challenges. This can help countries, especially developing countries, develop their own innovative solutions, scientific research, and new environmentally sound technologies, and creative industries, with the support of the international community and through collaboration among public and private sector, civil society and research institutions.

16. We further recognize the key role of Governments in enhancing the science-policy-society interface and nurturing a culture of innovation, with active engagement of relevant stakeholders from the public and private sectors, civil society and research institutions, which all have complementary roles.

17. We recognize the role of private financing in complementing public financing for access to technology, including through public-private partnerships and other measures, as appropriate.

18. We also recognize the importance of encouraging small and medium-sized enterprises, young entrepreneurs and women in science, technology and innovation, as well as in the creative industries, and the need to address the barriers that they face in accessing private and public financing.

19. We note that developed countries account for the bulk of global research and development expenditure and intellectual property rights holders, and we recognize the transformational changes in innovation dynamics, including an increase in intellectual property rights holders in developing countries.

20. We recall the request in the Rio outcome document for relevant United Nations organizations to identify options for a facilitation mechanism that promotes the development, transfer and dissemination of clean and environmentally sound technologies, and the report of the Secretary-General on this request,<sup>7</sup> noting its recommendations to the General Assembly at its sixty-seventh session regarding the facilitation mechanism on the basis of the options identified and taking into account existing models. We further recall the decision to hold a series of workshops on, inter alia, the technology needs of developing countries, options to address those needs, including capacity-building, and a technology facilitation mechanism, taking into account existing mechanisms and the need to avoid duplication and promote synergies and coherence, as well as for the Secretary-General to report to the Assembly at its sixty-eighth session, on the discussions, options and recommendations from the workshops, including on the way forward, as well as on additional inputs from Member States and the United Nations system. We invite Member States to engage actively and constructively in debating the report, upon presentation.

21. We also recall the request made by the General Assembly to the Secretary-General to take the steps necessary to undertake a joint gap and capacity analysis on a priority basis by 2013, with the aim of establishing a technology bank and science, technology and innovation supporting mechanism dedicated to the least developed countries, building on existing international initiatives.

22. We emphasize the importance of designing policies to support science, technology and innovation, and to utilize the potential of culture within the framework of national development strategies and action plans for sustainable development, linking them to economic, social and environmental policies and setting clear priorities for public expenditure and investment, and in this regard encourage Governments to allocate appropriate financing, in accordance with their national development priorities, and we reiterate the need to systematically incorporate a gender perspective into these policies.

23. We recognize that the culture of innovation can provide a supporting environment for the advancement of science, technology and innovation, and call for efforts to promote creativity and a culture of innovation through a variety of measures, inter alia, awareness campaigns that emphasize the potential of science, technology and innovation, as well as culture; increased visibility of the achievements of scientists, engineers, entrepreneurs, artists and performers within societies; encouragement of creativity and calculated risk-taking; science, technology and innovation-related campaigns; and the nurturing of entrepreneurial skills within education systems.

24. We also recognize the valuable contribution of traditional knowledge to the development of science and technology and their application, inter alia, in agriculture, health care, industry and culture.

25. We stress the importance of fostering synergies between modern science and technology and local and indigenous knowledge, practices and innovation as a vehicle for achieving sustainable development. In this regard, we recognize the importance of preserving and maintaining local and indigenous traditional knowledge and community practices of environmental management, as well as the promotion of global awareness of the linkages between cultural and biological diversity, including through the preservation and encouragement of the customary use of biological resources, as part of a comprehensive approach to sustainable development.

26. We note with concern the widespread underrepresentation of women and girls in many fields of science and technology which represents a loss of talent and perspectives, and reaffirm our commitments to achieving full and equal access and participation of women and men in the design of science and technology policies and research and development agenda-setting, as well as in decision-making in science and technology institutions.

27. We reiterate the need to ensure coordination and coherence on science, technology and innovation and culture-related policies, and to pursue evidence-based decision-making through close collaboration and coordination among the institutions within government, academic research communities, the private sector and civil society, which have complementary roles.

28. We encourage the development of cultural industries, cultural tourism and culture-related microenterprises, and stress the need for all countries to facilitate the growing contribution of creative industries, including cultural industries, to international trade consistent with countries' international commitments and obligations, where applicable.

29. We recognize the importance of grass-roots and inclusive innovation, including low-tech innovative solutions, aimed at users facing affordability constraints, and of providing services to as many people as possible with few resources, and encourage Governments in accordance with their national development priorities, to foster and promote its role in national innovation policies and systems designed to promote poverty eradication and sustainable development.

30. We reaffirm the key role of all levels of government and legislative bodies, and acknowledge the efforts of local authorities and communities, in promoting sustainable development, including through the design and implementation of science, technology, innovation and cultural policies.

31. We acknowledge the role of civil society and the importance of enabling all members of civil society to be actively engaged in sustainable development, and we recognize that information and communications technologies are facilitating the flow of information between Governments and the public, and also recognize that improved participation of civil society depends upon, inter alia, strengthening access to information and building civil society capacity and an enabling environment. In this regard, we recall articles 19 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights<sup>8</sup> and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.<sup>9</sup>

32. We encourage the promotion of a sustainable life cycle approach emphasizing the sustainable production and consumption, including in the design stage, of products that ensures, inter alia, effective management, prevention and reduction of waste. We therefore commit to further reduce, reuse and recycle waste and to increase energy recovery from waste, with a view to managing the majority of global waste in an environmentally sound manner and, where possible, as a resource. We support regional and national initiatives necessary to accelerate the shift towards sustainable consumption and production in order to promote social and economic development within the carrying capacity of ecosystems by addressing the issue of, and where appropriate decoupling, economic growth and environmental degradation, by improving efficiency and sustainability in the use of resources and production processes and reducing resource degradation, pollution and waste. In this regard, all countries should take action, with developed countries taking the lead, taking into account the development needs and capabilities of developing countries through mobilization, from all sources, of financial and technical assistance and capacity-building for developing countries.

33. We underscore the importance of educational policies and institutions to promote science, technology and innovation, including through building the capacities of higher educational institutions, especially in developing countries, to carry out research and innovation for sustainable development, including in the field of education, and to develop quality and innovative programmes, including entrepreneurship and business skills training, professional, technical and vocational training and lifelong learning, geared to bridging skills gaps for advancing national sustainable development objectives.

34. We emphasize the importance of greater international cooperation to improve access to education, including by building and strengthening education infrastructure and increasing investment in education, particularly

35. We reaffirm the need to achieve equal access and participation of women and girls in education and training in science, technology and innovation, to integrate a gender perspective in the science and technology curricula at all levels of education, to promote career development for women scientists, researchers and engineers, and to develop entrepreneurial activities focused on science and technology for youth and women. We also encourage the use of gender-based analysis and gender impact assessments in research and development in science, technology and innovation as well as user-driven approaches to technology development in order to increase the relevance and usefulness of advancements in science and technology for both women and men.

36. We encourage the fostering of effective public-private partnerships, including for research policies and activities, which are critical to driving science, technology and innovation to address local development priorities in pursuit of sustainable development.

37. We underline the importance of utilizing science, technology and innovation at all stages, as well as traditional knowledge, in the design and implementation of more coordinated and comprehensive strategies for disaster risk reduction and disaster recovery at the national and international level in order to increase resilience and provide a smoother transition between relief, recovery and development.

38. We recognize that innovation can be encouraged through the use of various public financing tools at the national level.

39. We emphasize the importance of technology transfer to developing countries, and recall the provisions on technology transfer, finance, access to information and intellectual property rights as agreed in the Johannesburg Plan of Implementation,<sup>2</sup> in particular its call to promote, facilitate and finance, as appropriate, access to and the development, transfer and diffusion of environmentally sound technologies and corresponding know-how, in particular to developing countries, on favourable terms, including on concessional and preferential terms, as mutually agreed. We also take note of the further evolution of discussions and agreements on these issues since the adoption of the Plan of Implementation.

40. We stress the importance of promoting a balanced and effective intellectual property framework within which to incentivize innovation and investment. That framework should reflect the new and changing science, technology and innovation landscape. Intellectual property systems should take into account the development needs of each country.

41. We recall article 31 of the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples,<sup>10</sup> which recognizes that indigenous peoples have the right to maintain, control, protect and develop their cultural heritage,

The Economic and Social Council,

Recalling the Istanbul Declaration and the Programme of Action for the Least Developed Countries for the Decade 2011-2020, adopted by the Fourth United Nations Conference on the Least Developed Countries, held in Istanbul, Turkey, from 9 to 13 May 2011, and endorsed by the General Assembly in resolution 65/280 of 17 June 2011, in which the Assembly called upon all the relevant stakeholders to commit to implementing the Programme of Action,

Recalling also General Assembly resolutions 67/220 and 67/221 of 21 December 2012,

Emphasizing the need for coordinated implementation, coherent follow-up and monitoring of the Istanbul Programme of Action, and noting the key role of the Office of the High Representative for the Least Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries and Small Island Developing States in this regard, as set out in paragraph 155 of the Programme of Action,

Recognizing that, over the years, the responsibilities of the Office of the High Representative have increased considerably in their scope and complexity,

Noting that the theme of the 2013 annual ministerial review is “Science, technology and innovation, and the potential of culture, in promoting sustainable development and achieving the Millennium Development Goals”,

4. Reaffirms that building a critical mass of viable and competitive productive capacity in agriculture, manufacturing and services is essential if the least developed countries are to benefit from greater integration into the global economy, increase their resilience to shocks, sustain inclusive and equitable growth and eradicate poverty, achieve structural transformation and generate full and productive employment and decent work for all;

10. Welcomes steps to improve the effectiveness and quality of aid in least developed countries, and underlines the need for enhancing the quantity and quality of aid to least developed countries by strengthening national ownership, alignment, harmonization, predictability, mutual accountability and transparency, and results orientation;

been made in the Istanbul Programme of Action in its eight priority areas, namely, (a) productive capacity, (b) agriculture, food security and rural development, (c) trade, (d) commodities, (e) human and social development, (f) multiple crises and other emerging challenges, (g) mobilizing financial resources for development and capacity-building, and (h) good governance at all levels, in a coordinated, coherent and expeditious manner;
