The National Commission for Outer Space Affairs believes that it is appropriate to define and delimit outer space, inasmuch as that would make it possible to determine the liability of States and clarify the concept of national sovereignty. It would also resolve any ambiguities in and enhance national legislation and the conventions governing outer space, thus contributing to the application of the principle of the legal equality of all States, whereby outer space is used and explored freely by all States without any discrimination, on equal terms and in accordance with international law.
