A. Deliberations

17. Several speakers expressed appreciation for the work of the standing open-ended intergovernmental working group on improving the governance and financial situation of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC). They noted that the working group served as an important mechanism to enhance transparency and accountability and to enable a constructive dialogue between Member States and UNODC.

18. A number of speakers expressed appreciation for the targeted, specialized technical assistance of UNODC and underlined the importance of field-based programmes, as well as the need to continue and strengthen existing technical assistance programmes.

19. Several speakers expressed concern about the difficult financial situation faced by UNODC in view of the decrease in general-purpose funds and the concurrent increase in special-purpose funds. One speaker noted that UNODC should not become a donor-driven organization, as that would have a negative impact on the establishment of its priorities and the ownership of its core mandates. Some speakers expressed the view that the core activities should be funded from the regular budget.

20. Several speakers expressed support for the adjustments made by UNODC to the consolidated budget for the biennium 2018–2019 and, in that regard, welcomed the proposal to allocate programme support costs in a more flexible manner. UNODC was encouraged to continue its efforts to increase transparency in its dialogue with Member States during the budget-formulation and decision-making process.

21. Several speakers mentioned the need for a broader, more flexible and more transparent use of programme support cost funds at headquarters and by field offices, as appropriate, and noted that such an approach would help to maintain the delivery of UNODC activities in the field. Reference was also made to the importance of close coordination between headquarters and field offices, with the aim of avoiding duplication of projects and promoting efficient and effective management.

22. UNODC was encouraged to continue to evaluate and report on the challenges affecting the financial viability of field offices, as well as project delivery and administrative practices, in particular the implementation of full cost recovery. A number of speakers encouraged UNODC to engage with Member States in a collaborative process on those budgetary issues.

23. Several speakers welcomed the Office's engagement with the reform agenda of the Secretary-General and asked to be kept informed as the process unfolded. Appreciation was expressed for the efforts of UNODC to engage with Member States on issues related to the United Nations reform processes (management reform and reform of the development system), and it was proposed that a standing item on those reform processes be included in the agenda of the standing open-ended intergovernmental working group on improving the governance and financial situation of UNODC.

24. Several speakers underscored the importance of research for the effective functioning of UNODC, while expressing support for the revised budget. One speaker requested UNODC to strengthen consultation with Member States when conducting research programmes, including informing Member States about the plan of research publications through the meetings of the standing open-ended intergovernmental working group on improving the governance and financial situation of UNODC, in order to ensure the inclusiveness, transparency and accountability of the research outcomes.

25. Several speakers acknowledged the efforts of UNODC to promote equitable geographical distribution and gender parity among staff. Several speakers highlighted the importance of the Office making further efforts in that regard, including at the most senior levels. The importance of doing so while bearing in mind Article 101 of the Charter of the United Nations was also noted. UNODC was encouraged to implement its Gender Equality Strategy and to update it regularly.

A. Summary by the Chair

37. The Chair's summary of the salient points, which was not subject to negotiation, is presented below.

Current challenges

38. Many speakers stressed that cybercrime continued to increase, posing challenges for legislators and policymakers. Threats posed by cybercrime in its different forms were multifaceted and multidimensional and affected not only citizens, but also businesses and Governments.

39. Many speakers expressed their concern about the creation of a sophisticated digital underground economy in which computer data were the commodity, as well as about the facilitating role of cybercrime in the commission of various forms of transnational organized crime and terrorism.

40. A number of speakers noted that cloud computing raised a number of challenges for criminal justice practitioners, in particular with regard to applicable law and criminal jurisdiction. Requesting computer data from other jurisdictions was challenging owing to the unknown location of those data and delays in response that often exceeded the data-retention period, which could lead to the destruction of key electronic evidence. Dual criminality was also highlighted as a challenge for international cooperation.

Possible responses to them

41. In response to the challenges posed by cybercrime, many speakers provided an update on their preventive measures and legislative reform efforts, including with regard to criminalization and electronic evidence.

42. Many speakers underlined that international cooperation was crucial to effectively combating cybercrime, given its transnational and rapidly evolving nature.

43. Many speakers highlighted the need for fast and effective responses to requests for mutual legal assistance related to electronic evidence. One speaker suggested legislative amendments to allow for lawful access to data where only a set of possible locations of those data was known (i.e., in an indeterminate location), giving due respect to the sovereignty and territoriality of States.

44. Many speakers called for urgent action through, inter alia, the exchange of information and best practices, the development and updating of substantive and procedural laws, the more effective and efficient use of public-private partnerships, including for the prevention of cybercrime, electronic evidence-gathering and take-down procedures, the strengthening of international cooperation mechanisms, including 24/7 networks, and capacity-building activities. In that regard, several speakers expressed appreciation for the work of UNODC in providing focused technical assistance to requesting countries through its Global Programme on Cybercrime.

45. Many speakers underlined the significance of efforts to enhance the capabilities of competent national authorities to deal with cybercrime and electronic evidence. They called upon States and technical assistance providers to step up efforts for capacity-building and awareness-raising among practitioners. A number of speakers reported on capacity-building measures taken in their jurisdictions for law enforcement authorities and the judiciary. Specifically, some speakers recommended that the enactment of new legislation be accompanied by appropriate training measures.

46. A number of speakers referred to the value of existing regional and international instruments, including the Organized Crime Convention and the Council of Europe Convention on Cybercrime (Budapest Convention), and the need to enhance implementation of those instruments. Several speakers referred to the preparation of a second protocol to that Convention that would cover electronic evidence “in the cloud”.

47. A number of speakers reiterated that new responses were needed, including a new universal or global legal instrument within the framework of the United Nations. Reference was made by one speaker to the draft United Nations convention on cooperation in combating cybercrime presented by his Government in 2017.

48. Many speakers highlighted the added value of the open-ended intergovernmental Expert Group to Conduct a Comprehensive Study on Cybercrime to conduct a comprehensive study of the problem of cybercrime and responses to it by Member States, the international community and the private sector as the only platform within the United Nations for the exchange of information with a view to examining options to strengthen existing and to propose new national and international legal or other responses to cybercrime.

B. Workshop on criminal justice responses to prevent and counter cybercrime in all its forms, including through the strengthening of cooperation at the national and international levels

49. The 1st meeting of the Committee of the Whole, on 14 May 2018, was devoted to a workshop on the theme “Criminal justice responses to prevent and counter cybercrime in all its forms, including through the strengthening of cooperation at the national and international levels”, organized by the institutes of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network. The workshop was chaired by the First Vice-Chair of the Commission and was moderated by a representative of the Australian Institute of Criminology, a member of the United Nations crime prevention and criminal justice programme network.

100. A number of speakers highlighted the importance of data collection for evidence-based policy measures in relation to cybercrime. Concern was expressed that, while global figures generally suggested decreasing crime rates, dark figures, in particular those relating to cybercrime, remained high. One speaker mentioned that cybercrime currently accounted for nearly one third of all crimes in his country, and reported on national efforts taken by his Government to prevent and combat that type of crime. The speaker suggested the following possible responses to cybercrime: (a) strengthening governance and crime prevention measures in cyberspace at the national level; (b) strengthening international legal cooperation, including mutual legal assistance, extradition and evidence- and information-sharing; and (c) enhancing consultations on the development of an international legal instrument to combat cybercrime.

101. Other emerging crimes referred to included the smuggling of migrants, work-related crime, firearms trafficking, illegal mining and trafficking in precious metals. While a number of speakers called for the development of new international legal instruments, a number of other speakers called for the enhancement of the implementation of existing instruments.

B. Action taken by the Commission

102. At its 11th meeting, on 18 May 2018, the Commission was informed that draft resolution E/CN.15/2018/L.9 had been withdrawn by South Africa.

Prior to the adoption of the revised draft resolution, a representative of the Secretariat read out a statement on the financial implications of its adoption (see E/CN.15/2018/CRP.6, available on the UNODC website). Following the adoption of the revised draft resolution, the representative of Mexico thanked the other sponsors of the resolution and reiterated that his country and many members of the Commission considered trafficking in cultural property to be a serious offence. The observer for Iraq underlined the need to promote mutual legal assistance in order to implement the resolution and prevent the theft of cultural property. He also called for follow-up to the resolution on an ongoing basis.

All speakers recognized the significant role of the United Nations congresses on crime prevention and criminal justice and their inherent capacity to shape international and domestic policy in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice. Speakers also thanked the Government of Japan for its outstanding organizational and substantive preparations for the Fourteenth Congress. The completion of negotiations on the Doha Declaration prior to the Thirteenth Congress was noted as a good practice that should be replicated during preparations for the Fourteenth Congress.

111. The representative of Japan informed the Commission of his Government’s decision to organize a youth forum prior to the Fourteenth Congress and said that the modalities of the organization of the forum would be brought to the attention of the Commission at its twenty-eighth session. He commended the Secretariat on the well-balanced content of the discussion guide and requested its prompt finalization so that it could serve as the basis for discussions at the regional preparatory meetings. He also provided substantive feedback on the content of the discussion guide.

112. The representative of Costa Rica reiterated her Government’s intention to host the Latin American and Caribbean Regional Preparatory Meeting for the Fourteenth Congress in 2019, following previous practice.

113. Owing to the unique timing of the Fourteenth Congress in relation to the lifespan of the Sustainable Development Goals, many speakers noted that the Congress would provide an opportune occasion to go beyond discussions of traditional manifestations of crime and to discuss new and emerging forms of crime within a broader context. Furthermore, one speaker noted that transparent and effective crime prevention and criminal justice systems were no longer sufficient on their own, and that the effective participation of all sectors of society was crucial in order to prevent crime and violence.

114. Several speakers reported on their national efforts to implement the Doha Declaration, in which Member States had underscored the fundamental importance of the rule of law to sustainable development. In that context, one speaker noted the ongoing work of UNODC in implementing the Doha Declaration in the areas of strengthening judicial integrity and preventing corruption in justice systems, fostering the rehabilitation and social integration of prisoners and preventing youth crime through sport, and through the Education for Justice initiative.

Following the recommendation of the revised draft resolution, the representative of Japan stated that his Government would do its best to meet the expectations of Member States in relation to the Fourteenth Crime Congress, whose venue and date had been decided upon at the session. Japan was making steady progress in the preparations for the Congress and was looking forward to the outcome of the regional preparatory meetings in the period January to April 2019, as well as to fruitful discussions in Kyoto in 2020.

117. The Director of the Division for Policy Analysis and Public Affairs of UNODC made an introductory statement.

118. Statements were made by the representatives of Japan, the United States and Colombia. A statement was made by the observer for Thailand.

A. Deliberations

119. Some speakers highlighted that the Commission was the leading policymaking body in the United Nations system on crime prevention and criminal justice issues and, as such, could play an important role with regard to the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals and the monitoring of progress therein. Peace, stability and effective governance based on the rule of law were acknowledged as the prerequisites for sustainable development.

120. One speaker proposed three categories of links between the Commission’s work and the Sustainable Development Goals, stating that some of the Commission’s activities were directly linked to the achievement of the Goals (in particular Goal 16), some were directly connected to the achievement of one or more of the targets, and others were indirectly linked to the achievement of one or more of the Goals or targets. Another speaker suggested that the Commission should engage in an analysis of the links between the different Goals and the work of the Commission.

121. Some speakers welcomed efforts to enhance the coherence of the United Nations system and to enhance cooperation between UNODC and other agencies. Synergies among different parts of the United Nations system, including the Commission, should be strengthened. One speaker underlined the principle of shared responsibility and called on all States to work towards implementation of the 2030 Agenda within their national policies.

B. Action taken by the Commission

122. At its 11th meeting, on 18 May 2018, the Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council the approval of a revised draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly (E/CN.15/2018/L.4/Rev.2), sponsored by Andorra, Bangladesh, Belarus, Bulgaria (on behalf of the States Members of the United Nations that are members of the European Union), Canada, China, Colombia (on behalf of the States Members of the United Nations that are members of the Group of Latin American and Caribbean States), Egypt, Iraq, Israel, Japan, Kenya, Kuwait, Liechtenstein, Morocco, Nigeria, Norway, Oman, Pakistan, Qatar, the Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, South Africa, the Sudan, Switzerland, Thailand, Tunisia, the United Arab Emirates and Viet Nam. (For the text, see chap. I, sect. A, draft resolution I.) Following the recommendation of the revised draft resolution, the representative of Colombia, in his capacity as coordinator of the working group on criminal justice and crime prevention issues of the Group of Latin American and Caribbean States, thanked the Chair of the Commission on behalf of the Group for his efforts to take forward the draft resolution, which was very useful for the Commission. The observer for Iraq also thanked the Chair for presenting the draft resolution and expressed support for the resolution and the follow-up thereto. He welcomed work to prevent crime and contribute to the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals and voiced support for the efforts displayed by Japan in preparation for hosting the Fourteenth Crime Congress. The observer for Nigeria expressed her appreciation to the Chair of the Commission for having tabled the draft resolution. She observed that the work of the Commission was very valuable in the attainment of the Sustainable Development Goals, which were of great importance to Nigeria and Africa as a whole, which were facing development challenges.

123. At the same meeting, the Commission recommended to the Economic and Social Council the approval of a revised draft resolution for adoption by the General Assembly (E/CN.15/2018/L.7/Rev.1), sponsored by Andorra, Colombia, Ecuador, El Salvador, Finland, Honduras, Japan, Nigeria, Norway, Panama, the Philippines, Switzerland and Thailand. (For the text, see chap. I, sect. A, draft resolution III.) Prior to the recommendation of the revised draft resolution, a representative of the Secretariat read out a statement on the financial implications of its adoption (see E/CN.15/2018/CRP.6). Following the recommendation of the revised draft resolution, the observer for Thailand noted that his country acknowledged the important nexus between criminal justice and the Sustainable Development Goals, including the cross-cutting Goal 16. Among other important elements in the resolution were the importance of mainstreaming strategies to address vulnerable groups, addressing social inclusion and education and preventing and countering the effects of environmental crimes on society. Linking criminal justice with development would help to fully achieve the Goals. Thailand hoped that a forward-looking vision that helped Member States achieve what they aimed for would be established by 2030. Thailand also looked forward to criminal justice being mainstreamed into the broader context of the Sustainable Development Goals and for it to touch upon prevention, tackle development issues such as root causes of inequality in justice systems and to be in line with the integrated, indivisible and balanced implementation of the Goals. From discussions throughout the course of the session, Thailand had understood that there were different views and interpretations of the concepts included in the text of the resolution, as well as concepts not included in it. In that regard, Thailand highly appreciated all the contributions that had led to a consensus text, and thanked delegations for their constructive input. The representative of Japan recognized that the issue of terrorism in relation to the rule of law and the Goals needed to be further explored at future discussions of the Commission. It was hoped that, with the adoption of the resolution, the work of the Commission would accelerate the achievement of the Sustainable Development Goals in the run-up to the Crime Congress in Kyoto.
